| Please provide a one- to two-page narrative explaining how you would like to build a community of practice in restorative justice at UNM and provide input to strengthening our infrastructure for addressing harassment and bullying of faculty. Also delineate the resources you would bring to collaborating in a community of practice and what university resources you would like to draw on in support of your work. What challenges do the current policies for addressing harassment and bullying of especially BIPOC, LGBTQ, and women faculty present? What ideas would you like to share? What approaches would you like to pilot with support and help from others? Please provide evidence of your demonstrated and sustained commitment to equity and inclusion. You have the option to include information about your own social location in systems of inequality (such as race, gender, tribal status, first generation college status, ethnicity and SOGIE) and how your identity, background, culture, values and experience shape your leadership in equity work as a portion of this response. | |
